

GREATEST VOTING CONTEST IN WASHINGTON'S HISTORY

The Prizes to Be Given Away are Worth
Your Every Effort.

DO YOU WANT TO WIN A PRIZE?

There's an Easy Way to Do It. Read About It. Ask Us About It.

If you have been watching The Washington Herald's great voting contest you must know that never before in the history of Washington has such a magnificent offer been made by a newspaper. The proposition should interest every man or woman residing in the several districts included in this contest. If you are not already in the race we advise you to send in your nomination at once to the contest manager of The Washington Herald. He will see that you are given the full number of votes to which you are entitled.

The names of the candidates and the number of votes cast for each will be published for the first time on Sunday, April 11. You will then be able to see just what is being done by your competitors. Should there be a difference of some few hundred or thousand votes between you and the leaders, don't be frightened. You can easily catch up with them by turning in a year's subscription or so. You don't have to be a subscriber to The Washington Herald in order to compete for one of these prizes. The idea is to get your friends to subscribe for the paper and to give you their votes. Get right after them. Make them prove their loyalty to you. It won't be hard to do this. You'll find it ridiculously easy, once you've started.

You owe it to yourself to try to win one of these awards. Now is the time to pay the debt. It's the best chance you ever had to become the owner of a house and lot, a White Steamer, a Columbia Victoria Electric, or any other of the many valuable prizes we are giving away, for as little effort as you will be called upon to put forth.

You will always find instructions and suggestions in the columns of The Washington Herald, and after reading them over, if you do not understand all the details, you are invited to call upon or phone the contest manager. He will always be glad to hear from you, and his services in this matter are always at your command. An able corps of assistants are employed in the contest department of The Washington Herald, and upon your request a representative of the paper will call upon you and explain the conditions and help you in any way practicable.

OPPOSE HIGHER DUTY TRAVESTY ON ART

Chamber Committee Debates
Gloves and Hosiery.

Corcoran Gallery Is Occupied
by "Fakers."

WILL FRAME ITS PROTEST

WITTICISM ON ROOSEVELT

Recommend that if Any Change Is Made in Rates of Dingley Law on These Articles They Be Made Lower—Two Factories May Start in the National Capital.

At a joint meeting of four committees of the Chamber of Commerce last night action was taken looking to a formal protest to the Ways and Means Committee of the House against increasing the rate of duty on leather gloves and cotton hosiery.

The committees represented at the meeting were those on law and legislation, manufactures, and wholesale and retail trade.

The action taken was presented in two motions offered by Charles W. Claggett. The first was that it be the sense of the meeting that no increase be made in the tariff rates on gloves and hosiery in the proposed law before Congress, and that if any changes in reference to these articles are made, it should be a reduction in the present rate.

The second motion provided for a committee of five, to be appointed by the chairman of the meeting, to prepare a proper protest against the changes in the Payne law, the same to be reported to the board of directors of the chamber for action.

Will Frame a Protest.
A. Leftwich Sinclair, chairman of the committee on law and legislation, presented at the meeting, and at its close appointed the following committee of five to prepare the protest: Arthur C. Moses, Harry King, Isaac Gans, Charles W. Claggett, and Frank P. May.

The general subject of the proposed tariff on gloves and hosiery was presented to the meeting by Harry King, the main facts in relation to the matter being read from statements prepared by Marshall Field, of Chicago. From these statements it appears that it is proposed to increase the rates of duty on leather gloves that sell at retail in the United States at $1 a pair, about 20 per cent, and cotton hosiery at the same rate.

Several members of the joint committee spoke upon the subject, and there was a rapid fire of questions directed at Harry King and Isaac Gans, who represented the mercantile interests of the chamber in the matter. After the subject had been thoroughly discussed, the action proposed and regulation prices, the action proposed in the motions of Mr. Claggett was unanimously voted.

Would Start Shoe Factory.
The committee on manufactures held a largely attended meeting yesterday afternoon, at which two specific propositions to establish manufacturing plants in the city were considered.

One of these was laid before the committee by Charles J. Green, an extensive manufacturer of shoes, whose factory in Richmond was burned last December. Mr. Green is the manufacturer of the Kenmore shoe. He proposes to bring his plant to Washington, if satisfactory arrangements can be made to do so. The establishment employs about 250 operatives, and as presented by Mr. Green it would add materially to the business interests of the city.

The committee authorized sending an expert accountant to Richmond to go over the books of Mr. Green, ascertain the assets of the company and report to the committee. A subcommittee, consisting of Arthur C. Moses, W. S. Corby, Harry King, John Weaver, and H. C. Stiles, will also visit the factory of Mr. Green and report back to the committee.

The other proposition comes from Pittsburgh. Mr. Conant, of that city, proposes to bring to Washington his plant for the construction of a new style of electrical truck. Considerable time was taken up in acquainting the committee with the advantages of the truck, and a committee composed of Arthur C. Moses, W. S. Corby, C. A. Colburn, and E. C. Graham, will investigate the condition of the company and submit a report to the committee.

Names Land Fraud Investigators.
Secretary of the Interior Ballinger has appointed the following special agents for investigation of alleged land frauds in the West: Wilson H. Mennett, of Pennsylvania, assigned to San Francisco; Robert C. Willis, of North Carolina, to Little Rock, Ark.; George Hayworth, of Texas, to Phoenix, Ariz.; Clarence M. Booth, of Indiana, to Seattle, Wash.; Joseph G. Hendrick, of Kansas, to Seattle, and Frank D. Brown, of New York, to Enid, Okla.

LOCAL BRIEFS.
Rev. John Reed Shannon, pastor of the Metropolitan Memorial M. E. Church, will preach in Baltimore to-morrow morning and evening.

First Lieut. Hunter Kinsie, Twentieth Infantry, court-martialed at the Presidio of Monterey for alleged irregularities in examination papers, has been allowed to resign from the army.

William E. Etika died Wednesday evening at his residence, 18 1/2 street northeast, after a long and painful illness. He was a clerk in the office of the Surgeon General of the War Department for twenty-two years. The remains will be shipped this morning in his old home at Middletown, Pa., for burial.

Medical Inspector Henry Tucker Percy, U. S. N., was buried at Arlington yesterday afternoon with full military honors. Services for the day of the Episcopal church were conducted at the Percy home in the Washington Navy Yard, 1300 1/2 street, by Rev. Roland Otton Smith and Rev. Randolph H. McKim.

Fourth Annual Exhibition of Local Artists Inaugurated—In Contrast to the Real Works, Only Humorous Pictures Are Shown—Grotesque Paintings Make a Hit.

The "fourth annual execution of the society of Washington fakers" opened at the Corcoran Gallery of Art last night. The "execution" will endure for three days. On Tuesday the fakes will be sold at auction.

To those familiar with the students of the Corcoran Art School it will be clear that a travesty on art is being pulled off in the "mud room" of the gallery. For the benefit of the uninitiated it may be said that the annual "take-off" on the Washington artists' exhibit is now open to the public.

Upon entering the doorway of the "mud room" the visitor is confronted with a sign which reads: "Do not drop your eyes to the floor—they may get stepped on."

Turning to the right, the visitor is introduced to a string of grotesque caricatures placed in positions relatively similar to the canvases on the floor above. A glowing, symmetrically twisted excuse for a dog is labeled "The oriental puppy," and is designed as a take-off on Minkoff's "Oriental puppy," exhibited on the first floor.

Although he is far advanced in his journey to Darkest Africa, Theodore Roosevelt has not escaped the vicious caricature of the art students, and is shown standing in a tangle of jungle undergrowth fully equipped for the hunt, regarding a deep shadow at his feet. The work is labeled "His shadow." What the artist is trying to convey is in doubt, but she announces it a travesty on William Closson's effort at picturing "shadow" in a large oil now on exhibition. Miss May Baker is the artist.

Taft at the Oar.
The "helping hand" is the caption on a large watercolor showing President Taft at the oar of a fishing boat, with Roosevelt, in miniature, trying to help him row. This is the work of Miss W. Robertson, and is intended to portray "Teddy" making feeble efforts to assist in guiding the ship of state, while President Taft smiles good-naturedly and steers the way he desires.

William Closson's canvas entitled "The dance," a gay riot of color and action, is caricatured by a student in a watercolor showing "Buffs" and his lady in the swirl of a dashing two-step. The principal feature is the broad expanse of dusky neck and shoulders and the grinning negro face naturally portrayed.

The "fake committee" is as follows: "The manager," C. Platt; the "bustling," H. Hellprin; the "mascot," O. M. King; the "nothing-doing," Noyes, and "everything else," the whole school.

The catalog of the "fakes" is the effort of the original "phumple phumple," and is a mass of humor, wit, and sarcasm.

DISTRICT DINNER TO TAFT.
President Accepts Invitation and Reception Will Occur in May.

President Taft yesterday accepted an invitation to attend a dinner to be given in his honor by the citizens of Washington. It will probably occur the first week in May.

A joint committee of the Washington Board of Trade and Washington Chamber of Commerce tendered the invitation. This committee was composed of J. Henry Small, jr., president of the board, and John Guy Edson, Theodore W. Noyes, and Scott C. Bone, of that organization, and in an informal talk that followed indicated a live interest in and acquaintance with District affairs.

While the date of the dinner was left open, it will doubtless occur early in May.

NEW INSPECTORS PLANNED.
Temporary Gaugers of Lumber Are Sought by District.

Two temporary inspectors of lumber will be appointed by W. C. Haskell, sealer of weights and measures, as a result of a complaint filed with the Commissioner by a Baltimore company. The District has three lumber inspectors, but two of these are ill, and consequently the work is hampered.

As the inspectors are paid by fee only, and as there is not enough work to afford them all a reasonable income, it is difficult to procure and keep them. Although the District government cannot officially provide warfarage facilities, it has been ascertained that adequate dockage can be had.

Church's Healing Power.
Following the Rev. Julian K. Smyth's course of lectures on the "Emmanuel Movement," at the New Church, the Rev. Dr. Frank Sewall will treat on Sunday evening next on "Divine suggestion: Its healing power and how availed of," and will close the series and the lecture on Easter Sunday night on "The great answer to the question, After death, what?"

DETERMINED TO DIE, SHE FOILS DOCTORS

Mrs. Cary Succumbs in the Asylum Hospital.

HER BROODING HASTENED END

Separated from Her Husband, a New Orleans Business Man, Woman Attempted Suicide Two Weeks Ago, but Was Revived—Frustrated Efforts of Physicians to Save Her.

Estranged from her husband and tired of life, Mrs. Elizabeth Cary, twenty-seven years old, of Richmond, Va., died at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in Washington Asylum Hospital. Her mother, Mrs. Mary Gaylord, was the only relative present. Her husband, Lewis Cary, could not be located, and has not yet learned of her death.

Mrs. Cary attempted to commit suicide about two weeks ago by swallowing a quantity of strychnine. She was removed to Emergency Hospital, where physicians saved her life for a few days by timely aid.

The patient was then removed to Washington Asylum Hospital, where a corps of physicians labored in vain to restore her to health.

Determined to Die.
Apparently Mrs. Cary had determined to die despite medical aid. Day by day she sank. Nothing interested her, and she lay on her cot staring for hours at the ceiling. She grew pale and thin, and never spoke until addressed. Doctors realized she would die if she continued to brood over her troubles, and attempted to console and comfort her. Their efforts were futile.

Mrs. Gaylord arrived in Washington a few days ago from her home in Richmond, and went to her daughter's bedside. Even the presence of her mother failed to aid Mrs. Cary, and two days ago she lapsed into unconsciousness and remained so to the end of her life.

Mrs. Cary was well known in Richmond and New Orleans, in which latter city her husband was in business. Marital troubles arose between Cary and his wife months ago, and they separated. Mrs. Cary came to Washington, where she had no friends or relatives, and obtained a position as clerk with a real estate firm in the Union Trust Building.

Had Swallowed Strychnine.
Shortly after noon on March 19 last Mrs. Cary staggered into a lively stable in Eighth street northwest and asked to be driven to a hospital. The woman showed signs of great suffering, and a hurry run was made to Emergency Hospital. It was found she was suffering from strychnine poisoning. A note in the woman's purse addressed to her mother, intimated she intended ending her life.

The body has been removed to the morgue, and it is probable an inquest will be held this morning. Physicians at Washington Asylum Hospital decline to name the cause of Mrs. Cary's death. The body will be sent to the family home in Richmond to-day.

MOTHER'S EFFORT UNAVAILING
Mrs. Keefe Fights Flames, but Her Baby Dies.

Little Boy, Playing with Matches, Sets Clothes on Fire—Woman Herself Is Burned.

Bitting a match in childish play, Stephen Keefe, three years old, started a flame which caused his death last night. The boy pulled the match from his mouth, and the fire burned his little red lips. He threw away the flaming piece of wood, but not far enough, and the fire reached the hem of the kilts he wore.

In an instant he was enveloped in a mass of flames, which ate away the thin dress, leaped up around his throat, burning his face and hands, while he screamed in agony. His mother, who was in an adjoining room, heard her baby's cries and ran to his help. With instinctive disregard for self, when she saw her boy burning, she grabbed the child to her breast, fighting and beating with her bare hands the flames which were taking the young life.

Endangering her own life, she put the boy on the floor and wrapped her heavy skirts about him, smothering the flames. A few seconds' agonized screaming, and the mother had won the fight to put out the fire. There was then another fight, the struggle to save the baby's life. The mother ran frantically down stairs for medical assistance. A physician was soon on the scene, and applied emergency remedies. The boy was removed to Georgetown Hospital, where physicians made ineffectual attempts to save him. He died a few minutes after arriving at the hospital.

Stephen was the youngest son of Joseph Keefe, a watchman at the State, War, and Navy Department, living at 1226 Twenty-eighth street northwest. Mr. Keefe left his apartment on the second floor of the Twenty-eighth street house shortly after supper last night. Mrs. Keefe and her sons—Robert, six years old, and Stephen—remained at home about 7 o'clock. The boys were playing on the floor in the bedroom, while the mother was attending to household duties in an adjoining room. A lamp was burning on a bureau in the bedroom, and near it was a box of matches. Robert contented himself with playing with a set of blocks, but Stephen tried of something more entertaining. He found the box of matches on the bureau, and sat down on the floor to amuse himself with the new plaything. He pulled the matches from the box and scattered them about. Happily, he put one in his mouth and chewed it. It ignited and fell on his dress. In a second the flames were burning his flesh. He screamed, and his mother came to his assistance, but to no avail.

Neighbors finally came to the woman's aid, and Dr. M. Hunter, of 2308 N street northwest, was notified. The physician ordered the boy removed to a hospital, and treated. Mrs. Keefe, her hands, arms, and face were severely burned. It is considered remarkable that the woman did not inhale the flames. That would have resulted in her death. She is prostrated by the loss of her baby.

"Homes of a Hundred Ideas"

PUTTING THE IDEALS TO PRACTICAL USE.

Women have ever dreamed of ideal homes—but they have been compelled to live in houses. Happily we have learned what ideals constitute an ideal home, and are incorporating them in structures that will establish the value of a home in contrast to houses which are identified as shabby places in which to abide.

The embodying of ideals of the women of Washington in our new homes is being accomplished as rapidly as architect, builder, and mechanics can produce results.

Naturally the completion of these homes is fraught with interest. Here is an innovation: Homes that are built as women want them; homes that cost no more than houses; homes that can be purchased by the salaried man who now pays rent.

Our purchase plan is not for the man of ample means and high salary. They offer to the man of moderate means an opportunity not only to surround his family with the comforts of a home, but enable him to reduce the monthly payments in the purchase of a home to its rental value, interest included, and at the same time credit the larger part of that rent toward paying for his home.

To the thinking man and woman our plan is now apparent; to establish homes in contrast to houses; to encourage home-owning against renting.

These homes are now nearing completion and Shannon & Luchs (Selling Agents) will soon advertise the location.

Middaugh & Shannon, Inc., Owner,
COLORADO BUILDING.

"No place like home; no homes like ours."

The Washington Herald has selected for their contest one of our "Homes of a Hundred Ideas." They state that the reason this selection was made was because of location and of Middaugh & Shannon, Inc., known reputation for good architecture, construction, and value, and because they are incorporating in their homes the ideas of the women of Washington.
